CHIEF, DEFENSE NUCLEAR SECURITY

SUBJECT:

Delegation of Security Authorities

REFERENCES:

- (a) Memorandum from Chief, Defense Nuclear Security, Designation and Delegation of Security Authorities, dated August 26, 2015
- (b) Crocker/Johnson memorandum dated October 17, 2006, subject: Official Delegated Federal Security Authority.

By Statute, the Chief, Defense Nuclear Security (CDNS) is responsible for the development and implementation of physical security programs for the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA), including the protection, control, and accounting of material.

The CDNS serves as the Cognizant Security Officer and is responsible for the development and implementation of security programs, operations, and facilities under the purview of NNSA. The CDNS is also the Officially Designated Federal Security Authority (ODFSA) for NNSA.

The present delegation of security authorities memorandum issued on August 26, 2015 (reference (a)), assigns responsibility for security to several NNSA organizations, including the Office of Emergency Operations (NA-40). However, the reorganization of the Office of Emergency Operations and the Office of Counterterrorism and Counterproliferation (NA-80) has precipitated a re-designation of security authorities from the Office of Emergency Response (NA-42) to the Office of Nuclear Incident Response (NA-84) (reference (b)).

The attached Delegation Order accomplishes the delegation of those security authorities to the Director of the Office of Nuclear Incident Response (NA-84).
